

Updated dam levels and seasonal outlook

Wednesday, 06 September 2017

Last Updated Wednesday, 06 September 2017

It is predicted that the greater Eden area will experience a dry spring and start to summer.

September to October

The South African Weather forecasting service system shows enhanced chances for above normal rainfall for the period along the coast and adjacent interior of the Northern Cape, but only slightly above normal for the western parts of the Western Cape and slightly below for the eastern parts (Eden district).

October to December

For October through to December the prediction is above the norm for both the Western and Northern Cape, except the extreme southern parts of the Western Cape where it is projected to be slightly below the norm.

Seasonal Weather outlook for South Africa

Western Cape dam level report